DEATH OF WILLIAM ASTOR

IT WAS HARDLY KNOWN HERE THAT HE WAS SICK AT PARIS.

Mrs. Aster, Mrs. Orms Witson, and Mrs. Coleman Brayton Were With Him-The Last of the Third Generation of the Family in New York-The Value of Ric Estate Said to be Fifty Million Bollars. Pants, April 26.-William Astor of New York died here at the Hotel Liverpool at 11 o'clock last night. The remains will probably be forwarded to New York on the steamship La Bourgogne. William Astor was the last of the third gene ration of the Astor family in New York. The larger share of the estate has descended through his brother. John Jacob Aster the second. These are the two lines down which the property has come:

John Jacob Astor L William Backhouse Astor.

John Jacob Astor II. William Astor (just deceased). William Waldorf Astor. John Jacob Astor III.

William B. Astor, to whom the first John Jacob left nearly all his estate. himself left four times as much to John Jacob II. as he left o William, who died on Monday. John Jacob the second died two years ago, and William Waldorf Astor has most of his estate. William Waldorf has sons, the eldest named after him, and John Jacob the third has a son, William.

William Astor was born July 12, J830, in New York city. He developed a studious disposition, was taught by private tutors, and at 16 he was prepared to enter Columbia College. He completed his college course in 1840. He was good in nearly all the studies, although he excelled in none. Money making he did not consider in his line. He wanted to go abroad and spend money. This was not exactly in acjust out of college he secured his father's consent to visit Eastern countries in which he felt particularly interested, and he went to Egypt. He travelled all through that country and the surrounding countries. He liked Turkey, and spent a year there.

His appetite for travel was satisfed in 1852, and he returned to America. His father wanted him to settle down and go into busiwanted him to settle down and go into business. He wouldn't do that for more than a year. He went into society a little, and he became also a great lover of sports. Fine horses and yachts were his hobby for a year, and then he fell in love with and married Miss Caroline Schermerhorn. The marriage was performed on kept. 23, 1853. For a time Mr. Astor gave up his horses and yachts, and his father induced him to enter the office and aid in the management of the vast and fast accumulating estate. The son was associated with his father thereafter until his father's death in 1875.

A banker, an intimate friend of the Astor family, said yesterday that William B. Astor had determined Weave his younger son only a million dollars, which was what he left to each of his doughters. He was dissatisfied with the young man's manner of living, and he did not believe that the son was fitted to care for a larger fortune and increase it and perpetuate it. There was another brother, Henry, who had not married to suit his father, and he too, was to be cut off. The father's intentions were known to John Jacob II., who protested. He did not interfere as to Henry, but he said, WILLIAM ASTOR. ignoring Henry: "It is not right that my only brother should be put on a par with the girls of the family." The father stoutly maintained that William should have only the million, and he would not change his mind for a long time. Finally the arguments of the elder son prevailed, and on his father's death William received about one-fourth as much as John Jacob received.

received about one-fourth as much as John Jacob received.

"The old man was mistaken." said the banker. "about William's inability to hold on to money. After his father's death he became very economical. His wife had a great deal of property in her own right, and had a handsome income from it. She has had to use her own money for her splendid entertainments. Her husband declared that it was waste and that he had no money to waste on society. Mr. Astor was erratic, and his dislike for social functions was very pronounced."

Mr. Astor was very little known in New York. He was of a retiring disposition. He made few acquaintances and dismed few friends. Mrs. Astor's entertainments have been famous. Her husband all little part in them. His little social pleasure he took in a quiet way on his steam yacht, the Nourmahal. He made many trips up and down the coast and across to France. He did take great pride in his wife's jewels, and occasionally he added to her stock until she had one of the finest collections of jewels in America. At the opera and at receptions on occasions she has worn no less than $100,000 worth of diamonds. The jewels has wore at the marriage of her son. John Jacob Hil. to Miss Willing, in Philadelphias year or so ago, were worth considerably more than that.

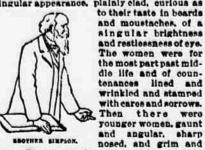

John Jacob Astor HL. the only son of William Astor, is unlike his father in many respects. He is fond of a luxurious life, and has shown hitherto little solicitude about the increase of his father's estate. He has three sisters, Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. James R. Hoosevelt, and Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton. Another sister, who became Mrs. Emily Van Allen, is dead. Whether or not recent events altered Mr. William Astor's plans for the division of his estate is not known on this side of the Atlantic. It is believed here, however, that Mrs. Astor will have control of the greater part of the estate while she lives, and that at her death it will be divided among the children in substantially equal shares. If this is done it will be the first time in the history of the family that daughters have been so treated. Since his father's death Mr. William Astor had lived in New York, but spent his winters in Europa. He was not personally attentive to the manusoment of his fortune, and all the details of the work have been fathful servants, and the grower his father's death Mr. William Astor had lived in New York, but spent his winters in Europe. SHE CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE.

Farewell Exercises for the Missie About to Go to Distinct Lands. Yesterday was a great missionary day mong the Christian Alliance people, who are orthodox, of no particular sect, and believers in healing by faith, and all day the Gospel Tabernacle in Eighth avenue, near Forty-fourth street, was crowded with the adherents of the Christian Alliance, who sang and prayed and listened to talks and otherwise took part in some very unusual services.

In connection with the Christian Alliance Tabernacle there is a college for the training of missionaries, and each spring this college graduates a number of men and women who take an exceedingly simple and humble outfit of clothing and go into foreign lands and live in the humblest way and preach and teach This year about thirty graduated, and the ser-vices yesterday were to bid them farewell and

The congregation was of the same people for all those services and of about the same size. There were far more women than men. although not a few men. These men were of singular appearance, plainly clad, curious as prim. There were also young girls, as deeply religious as their elders, showing a trifle more fondness for gayety of dress than their elders, but as full of prayer and amens as any. The young men were few and enthusiastic, but kept in the background except in the singing.

It is a custom among these people that any one upon whom the Master has laid some subject as the especial burden of his prayer shall give it out that all may pray for it. The morning service was a prayer service of this

IN SILENT PRAYER. sort. The leader was the Rev. A. B. Simpson a man with jet black hair, jet black full beard a man with jet black hair, jet black full beard, pallid complexion, and eyes of piercing brightness and darkness. He made a considerable talk, and then announced that he wanted all those who had burdens of prayer to announce them so that they might be taken down and prayed over by the whole congregation. The responses to this were eager and rapid. Sometimes four or five were on their feet at once. There were young women and old women, young men and old men.

A man who was going to the South Sea Islands with several others said he wanted all to pray that the Lord would let them know before they left New York exactly what island they should begin upon, and that he would prepare the minds of the people of that island for the truth they were bringing. Another man of the same band wanted all to pray that the Lord would give them every is I and u pon which they set their feet.

ask what they should do to be saved. One woman wanted prayers for the success of the Gospel in the city missions, and another for missionaries to carry the Gospel into the country and the desolate places of the United States, where no Gospel is preached. An old woman said that she had read that all countries were being barred to God's ancient people, and she wanted prayer that the Christian nations might combine and force Turkey to open the way for them to go to Palestine.

Palestine.
A tall, thin woman of middle age wanted prayers for three boys who had gone as missionaries to Thibet and that the Lord might assure all Thibet to them. A man wanted prayer that Rockaway Beach might be brought to Christ this summer. George Stanley wanted prayers that his father and mother might be converted. Frank Jones wanted prayer that Mr. and Mrs. Itamsay might convert the north of Ireland this summer, and some one class wanted Mr. and Mrs. Ekbal blessed in their mission to Sweden.

TELLING HER SORROW.

chained to me, and he preached to the one on his right hand and then he told the one on his left the story of Christ and Him crucified.

"A short time ago some missionaries were killed in the Soudan, and some people said; This is terrible, that any one should be killed preaching the Gospel. We must withdraw our missionaries from the Soudan. But that is not the way to talk. We want more missionaries killed, we want more martyrs and more people with the spirit of martyrdom. I like the mott of the Baptist Missionary Society. There is the altar in the one hand and the plough in the other and the bullock between, and the words underneath are: Ready for either. That is the true missionary spirit."

The missionaries were sitting on the platform, and their eyes were unlitted and their laces were excited. The congregation also was wrought up. Evidently refore them all there were visions of martyrdom and its glories.

This missionary organization and, indeed, all the works of the Christian Alliance, are supported by voluntary contributions, which, they assert, come in reply to prayer. The Alliance has about $500,000 worth of real estato in Eighth avenue, near Forty-fourth street, besides its missions and mission funds.

DANGERS THREATENED,

But Two Children Were Not Hurt, Although One Fell and the Other Rose.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., April 26 -Two Connecticut midgets involuntarily distinguished themselves in novel or rather dangerous ways one day this week. The two-year-old girl of August Spielman of Rockville accomplished the feat of tumbling out of a third-story window to the flagstone beneath without hurting herself a bit. Her parents were so incredu-lous that they had Dr. Leonard examine the child, and the doctor said: "It might be a miracle, but nevertheless there wasn't a scratch on the babe." An hour later she was playing in the street.

The other heroine is little Maud Bacon, who dwells on steep Groton Bank, across the river from New London, and down which the British rolled the soldiers of the American garrison of Fort Griswold, in barrels, after they had con-rolled the soldiers of the American garrison of Fort Griswold, in barrels, after they had conquered it in the Revolution. Not far from Maud's home is the granite shaft—Groton Monument—erected to the memory of the soldiers, and, although the child is only 2% years old, she knows the story of the famous fight by heart. It is her custom to play about the base of the tall shaft and talk with its keeper, who charges reopic 10 cents a head for the privilege of climbing the monument. He told Maud recently that nust as soon as she was big enough to attempt the feat he would let her climb the shaft, which is 235 feet high, for nothing. "But you won't be able to do it before you are 8 or 10 years old at any rate," he added.

Maud didn't make any reply, but made up her mind about a prospective monument climb right then and there. One morning a day or two later the keeper of the monument had to quit his post in the chamber at its base for a little whilb, and when he went away he left the monument door ajar. Not long thereafter Maud's parents missed her, and hunted for her vainly about the village far and low, but not high. In their hurrying search they came to the chamber in the base of the shaft, and said to the keeper, who had returned to his post, that they wondered where in the world Maud had strayed to. Half in jest, they said they should not wonder much if she had climbed the great tower, and the keeper, glancing up the dark, hollow shaft, that is threaded by skeleton iron stairs, shook his head and laughed grimly at the joke. But at that very instant faint child-like tenes, that came, seemingly, out of the sky, arrested the attention of the three persons in the tower chamber; and after an instant's thought Maud's father suddenly exclaimed: "That's Maud's father, and he

It is very sad, and I'm awfully sorry, following right on the heels of that other case.

The deceased man was born and raised in Columbus. His parents resided here until their death, his father dying a year ago and his mother in January last. He was about 32 years old at the time of his death. About twelve years ago he was with Billy Manning, and was educated by him. He was head man with Haverly and Manning for ten years and other minstrel companies. Recently he signed with the Christianer Minstrels for a six months' tour of England, Ireland, and Scotland, and was to meet them in New York on May 2. He was an artist in his line, and had many friends in Columbus.

The post mortem was held to-day. From the examination the cause of death is not apparent. The internal organs will be examined.

POISONOUS WALL PAPER.

It Proves Detrimental to Health and Dangerous to Life, BOSTON, April 26.-Several cases of arsenical poisoning from wall paper have recently been reported in Newton and Wollesley. Dr. C. H. Osgood of Wellesley Hills, a weil-known dentist in this city, has been in bad health for years, especially Mondays after staying at home Sundays. Three weeks ago he fainted home Sundays. Three weeks ago he fainted in his office, and Dr. Blodgett, who was called, and he was suffering from arsenical poisoning. Specimens of the wall paper in his house showed upon examination by Prof. Wood large quantities of arsenic. A 10-year-old daughter of Judge White of Dedham, who lives near Dr. Osgood, is another vietim, whose health has much improved since the removat of the wall paper. At West Newton a year-old child recently died from, in the opinion of the consulting physician, the effects of this poisoning. These and other cases are awakening wide interest and alarm.

Election at the Maritime Exchange

The Maritime Exchange elected officers yes terday. There were three tickets in the field. each bearing the names of Edward S. Atwood. for President; Clayton Platt, for Vice-Presifor Precident; Clayton Platt, for Vice-President, and Henry Stadimair, for Treasurer. Of the six Directors chosen for two years, Messrs. Alexander S. Murphy, John A. Cormack, and Louis T. Romaine were on all the tickets, to gether with Messrs. Jacob R. Teliair, John B. Woodward, and M. C. Gasper, as Auditing Committee, and Messrs. V. T. Brand. F. R. Parker. W. W. Caldwell, and J. de Pinaza, as Inspectors of Floction. All those named were elected. For the three remaining Directors, however, there was a triangular contest, and the choice fell upon Messrs. W. A. Lentilhon, George O. Lord, and F. Whitney Doans.

82,100 Paid for a Figure of Buddha-176 Pieces Bring More Than $16,000, One hundred and seventy-six pieces of fine Japanese lacquer brought $10.538.50 at the American Art Association sale yesterday. The offerings included a large variety of objects. and were all of a high quality. Many pieces added the value of antiquity to that of delicate workmanship. H. O. Havemeyer was again the largest buyer, and there was no outbidding him when he showed a desire for any par-ticular piece. John Goetz, R. E. Moore, Louis Werthelmber, Henry S. Adams, and several collectors who bid under assumed names were also among the larger buyers. The first piece offered brought the highest price paid at the sale for a single article. This was the figure of Buddha shown in the cut. The price was $2,100, and John Goetz was the purchaser. 32 Inches high, was in the very finest of gold lacquer. The carving throughout was of the most delicate character in Japanese art. The figure formerly stood in the sacred temple of Nari, from war about twenty years AUGUST MENTAL ago. The price at which it was purchased was much under its cost in Japan ten years ago, and a small part of its estimated value at the present time. Mr. Goetz bought it for a and some lacquered trays, all set in a handsomely lacquered stand, occasioned considerable competition. A collector got it for $405. R. E. Moore paid $235 for the next plenie box offered, a beautiful set of the seventeenth century, decorated with sea shells and sea grass in linely powdered gold lacquer and gold laaf. A manuscript box of the sixteenth century in black lacquer, with pearl inlayings, went to Dr. Benjamin for $90. Dr. Benjamin also paid $300 for a tail, square box of aventurine lacquer.

Some competition was started by a little perfume box in the form of five overlapping squares. It was of heavy gold lacquer, and went to H. O. Havemeyer for $200. The same buyer immediately atterward paid $375 for a box of the seventeenth century in the form of a heart-shaped fan. A small portable writing case with three drawers went to R. E. Moore for $135 after a sharp contest.

Much interest was aroused by the butterfly perfume box which was regarded as one of the gems of the collection. There were a number of bidders. Mr. Havemeyer got it for $710. The box was very small, and shaped like a flower, and contained smaller boxes shaped like buttorflies, and so decorated. It was in the finest of gold lacquer. Very soon after $Mr. Havemeyer bid another perfume lox quite as small up to $410 before securing it. This was a rich specimen of the work of the last century, showing autumnal grasses in leaf and powdered gold.

A portable cabinet in gold lacquer of the early seventeenth century, exquisitely inlaid in pearl, went to "Libby" for $220, and John Goetz paid $130 for an oblong box of small size but exceptional beauty of workmanship. A calinet, 33 inches long and 22 inches high, of the early eighteenth century, went to Mr. Gould for $200. A daimio double stand, in the finest gold aventurine lacquer, mounted with sliver and showing exceptional workmanship, went to R. E. Moore for $400, while "Libby" or a laimio manuscript box of the seventeenth century, showing Japanese court seenes and floral patterns on a clouded ave made solely for the noties of old Japan went for $400 to a collector who gave an assumed name.

B. E. Moore paid $235 for a small perfume box, containing seven small boxes, in rich gold aventuring lacquers, decorated with chrysanthemums. A miniature cabinet of the early eighteenth century in powdered gold on a green tinted background went to John Goetz for $140. Charles Bonner paid $370 for a fanshaped incense box, with two compartments, exquisitely decorated in the finest lacquers. Although the lacquers sold yesterday brought relatively better prices than those of the day before, nevertheless they netted a considerable loss. The regular sale will close to-day, when a variety of European objects, including watches, shuff boxes, jewelry. Italian and Chippendale furniture, and some Japanese tapestries will be offered. All the other belongings of the association will be disposed of at a supplementary sale which will occupy three or lour afternoons of next week.

BISHOP M'DONNELL'S VICARS Not to be Appointed Until After Bis Installation Next Monday. Bishop Charles E. McDonnell of Brooklyn will celebrate mass at 8 o'clock this morning in the Church of the Transfiguration in Mott street, where he was baptized by the Rev. William McClellan on Feb. 18, 1854. He will be attended by the Rev. Thomas F. Lynch, pastor of the church, and the Rev. William F. Dougherty. Mrs. P. J. Kennedy, who presented a crozier to Bishop McDonnell, and sented a crozier to Bishop McDonnell, and other women who are friends of his family will attend the mass. After the services there will be a breakfast at the Sinclair House.

Bishop McDonnell sald yesterday that he would not appoint his Vicara-General and other diocesan officers until After his installation, which will take place in St. James's Cathedral in Jay street next Monday.

This evening the faculty and students of St. Francis Xavier's College in West Sixteenth street will give a reception in honor of the Bishop, after which he will go to the annual dinner of the St. James's Catholic Club of Brooklyn at Wilson's. In Pierrenont street. To-morrow night the Bishop will attend a reception at the Catholic Club, of which he was moderator.

A Model Express Delivery Service. The New York Terminal Express Company promises to give to New York city. Brooklyn. and some of the surburban towns a better deivery service for parcels and baggage than has ever before been provided. of Boston is one of the directors, and its officers are: President, Frank Jenkins: Secretary and Treasurer. David Paton; General Manager, H. M. Hubbell, and its general offices are at 11 East Fourteenth street.

Its wagons will make four daily rounds to all the stores by whom they are employed, and thus insure to purchasers a more prompt delivery than is possible under the present system, where each establishment employs its own wagons. It will also undertake on a different plan to carry out the design of the Parcela Express, the property of which it bought at Sheriff's sale. To travellors the company will be especially a convenience by reason of its agreement to deliver trunks on any floor of a house without extra charge. It will no longer be necessary to get home before one's luggage in order that it shall not be left in the lower hall. Drivers are to be chosen for courtesy and sobriety, and care is to be taken that wagons and harness are always clean and in order.

Caps and Gowns for the University of the City of New York.

The members of the various faculties and degrees of the University of the City of Yen York will hereafter don the cap and gown upon all academic occasions. The interior colors of the heads marking the various degrees will be: Arts and philosophy, violet; medicine, crimson; law, blue; divinity, purple; science and engineering, yellow; pedagogy, white.

The found it—you open it, said Sergeant Lane.

West cut the ribbon and undid the wrapper.

A pasteboard cuff hox was revealed. He raised the cover and two rais sprang out. One darted over Capt. McLaughlin's arm and out of the open door of the station. The other jumped to the floor and ran into the section room, where the reastress were playing domiroom, where the reserves were playing domi-noes. A dozen cops threw a dozen clubs at it and missed it and it ran down cellar. "The prisoner escaped," they reported to Capt. McLaughlin.
